How often and when am I billed?

Depending on the billing frequency that you chose when you bought your subscription, you receive an invoice either monthly or yearly. The amount of time since the last invoice date is called the Billing Period and shown on page one of the invoice. This time period represents the date range during which charges accrue for the current invoice. If you made a change to your subscription outside of this date range, like adding or removing licenses, the associated charges appear on the invoice for the next billing period.

> Note

You can change the billing frequency for a subscription by following the steps in Change the billing frequency for your Microsoft business subscription.

Starting on page two of the invoice, you see the charges grouped by their Service Period. The service period is the date range during which you're charged to use the service.

At the end of each billing period, you receive an email that says your new invoice is ready to view or download in the Microsoft 365 admin center. If you have more than one order, you receive an invoice for each order. For more information, see View your invoice in the Microsoft 365 admin center.

Why is my total due different from last month?

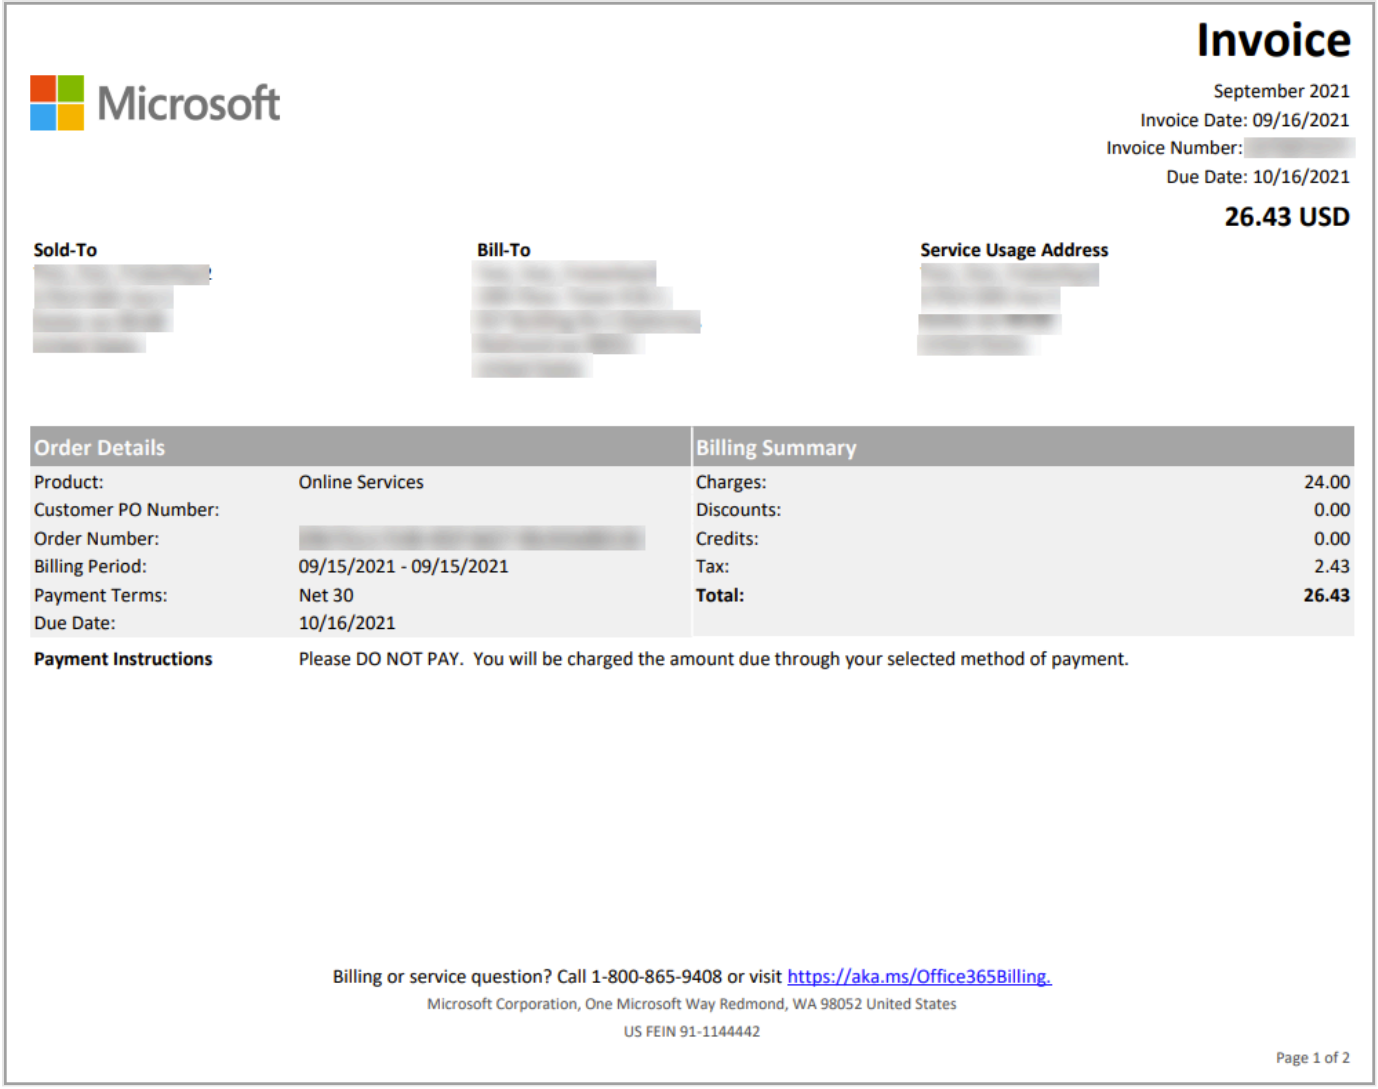

The amount billed for your subscription reflects the license price multiplied by the number of licenses purchased and any required taxes or fees.

If the amount billed is different than expected, that can happen for few reasons:

- You added or removed licenses from your subscription. Licenses changed mid-term are reflected on the next invoice. You might see a credit and rebill for the previous service period to account for this change. For details about what the information looks like in your invoice, see Understand page two of your invoice.
- The subscription was canceled. You receive an invoice after cancellation with any outstanding balance minus any credits.
- Your subscription renewed for a new term and the license price changed.

Overview of the invoice .PDF

Your invoice is a .PDF that contains at least two pages. Page one of your invoice contains the billing summary, which includes general information about the invoice, order, amount due, and payment instructions, if applicable. For details about what this information looks like in your invoice, see Understand page one of your invoice.

Understand the invoice header

The header appears at the top of every invoice page, and includes the month of service, and the Invoice Date, which is the date Microsoft created the invoice. The invoice is created the day after the end of your billing period. For example, if your billing period is January 15-February 14, your invoice date is February 15.

The header also includes an Invoice Number, the unique number assigned to your invoice. If you pay by wire transfer, include the invoice number with your payment.

Finally, the header includes the Due Date for payment of the invoice, and shows the total amount due. If you pay for your subscription with a credit or debit card, we charge your card the day after the invoice date.

Understand the invoice footer

The footer appears at the bottom of every invoice page and includes Microsoft business center address. Based on your country/region, the footer might include other information like the phone number to call for billing or technical support, a link to online self-help articles, and the address and tax ID for Microsoft in your country/region.

Understand page one of your invoice

Page one of your invoice contains address information for your organization, high-level details about your order, a summary of invoice totals, and instructions about how to pay your invoice.

Addresses

Three addresses appear at the top of the first page of your invoice. The Sold-To address is the name and address of the organization that bought the subscription. The Bill-To address is the address of your billing department. Service Usage Address is the address where the service is used. Usually, these addresses are the same. However, depending on the size and configuration of your organization, these addresses might be different.

To update the Sold-To address, see Change your organization's address, technical contact, and more. To update your Bill-To or Service Usage Address, see Change your billing addresses.

Order Details

On page one of your invoice, the Product is "Online Services," the generic term we use to describe your subscription. Page two lists the individual products in your order.

Customer PO Number is the purchase order (PO) number that you specify. You can't add a PO number to an existing invoice. If you update the PO number, it's included in future invoices. To change the PO number, see Change your purchase order number.

Order Number is the globally unique identifier (GUID) that identifies your order. Every time you buy a new subscription, a new order with a new order number is created. You receive an invoice for each order every billing period.

Billing Period is the period since the last invoice date.

Payment Terms is the number of days from the invoice date when payment is due.

Due Date is the date when the invoice payment is due. If your subscription is paid with a credit or debit card, we charge your card the day after the Invoice Date.

Usually, your bank has a reference field that you complete when you send a payment. Make sure that you reference the invoice number in that field.

Support

In some countries/regions, the invoice has a Support section that includes instructions on how to view past invoices in the Microsoft 365 admin center. It also includes a link to self-help articles, and for some countries/regions, the support phone number.

Understand page two of your invoice

The product name for your subscription is at the top of page two of your invoice. Below the product name is the formula that explains how the charges are calculated. If you have more than one product in your order, you see a separate section for each product and the associated charges.
